DISRUPTIONS FOR NTU STUDENTS, STAFF

Students and staff at the Nanyang Technological University (NTU) are seeing disruptions to their daily routine, as their campus houses the Youth Olympic Village.

Security is tight — only vehicles with labels are allowed in, and the entrance along Jalan Bahar and the nearby round-about have been cordoned off. Bus services have also been affected.

But staff and students have taken this in their stride. With some car parks closed, they now park off-campus, and use shuttle buses to reach NTU. Staff also start work later at about 10.30am or work from home.

As it is still vacation time, NTU expects disruptions to be minimal.

Chairman of the NTU-YOG steering committee Anthony Teo said: “This is not a custom-built facility, we are running a university. Although it is a privilege for us to have the Village, it is within the constraints of existing facilities.”

The next academic year has also been pushed back by a week and will start on Aug 30.
