Young Olympians right at home

NUS has a place in Olympic history as the home of the inaugural Youth Olympic Games. The athletes at these Games were less than 30 and 65, while the National Institute of Education was the host of events at the village square.

At the world’s first youth Olympic Games opened on 1 August, the NUS youth village became a popular venue for the athletes. Here, they were housed in the Jagan Hall, which was used as an accommodation for the student athletes.

As the village was designed to accommodate athletes from around the world, it was necessary to have a place where athletes could gather to socialize and unwind.

Following the success of the Youth Olympic Games, the NUS village has continued to host the world’s first youth Olympic Games. The venue was designed to accommodate athletes from around the world, and it was necessary to have a place where athletes could gather to socialize and unwind.

Aiming to become a world-class university, NUS is dedicated to providing a world-class education to its students. To achieve this, the university has invested heavily in its facilities and infrastructure, ensuring that its students have access to the best possible learning environment.
