

COURSE CONTENT

Course Code & Title	:	HL3007 Postcolonial Literature Category D (World Literature)
Academic Unit	:	3 AU
Pre-requisite	:	HL101

Course Description

The field of postcolonial literary studies tends to focus on the concerns of constituencies that are marginalised in the metropolis. Ideas concerning diaspora and hybridity/syncretism dominate this discussion. This module examines such issues and also expands the discussion by surveying important writers from a range of Southeast Asian contexts. Among other things, the theoretical and socio-cultural issues raised by anti-colonial resistance and decolonization will be addressed, together with the question of how writers fashion a usable past from disparate material, as well as issues of social justice and inclusiveness. Students will be encouraged to formulate a first-cut analysis of where they place themselves with regards to these issues and concerns.

Learning Objectives

1. Students will read important texts in the area and utilize close reading skills to discuss the issues raised.
2. Students will engage with and debate some of the topics raised, viz.:
  - Contesting Eurocentrism/Decolonising the mind
  - Inclusive nationalitarian culture?
  - Search for idiom and imagery appropriate to Southeast Asian locale
  - Self-exoticism and orientalism
  - Globalization and literature
