

HL3016: Gender and Sexuality Studies

AY2020-21, Semester 2

Lecturer: Doctor Kate Wright; Email: KEWright@ntu.edu.sg

This course examines the intersections of gender, sexuality, place, ability, status, race, and class in the cultural construction of bodies. It focuses on the relationship between the normal and the abject to highlight how that relationship influences which bodies arouse our desire and move us in disgust. We will consider a selection of texts and films in order to investigate the rhetorics of the exotic, the realistic, the sentimental, the inscrutable, and the repulsive in regard to these bodies. More than just looking at 'images of...' and 'identities', we will concentrate on theories of the production and perpetration of the bodies we see and how we see them.

Core theory texts (to be provided by the lecturer)

- A selection of essays and book chapters that address theories of gender and sexuality (see the material listed in the weekly schedule below)

Core short stories (to be provided by the lecturer)

- A.S. Byatt, 'Cold'
- Angela Carter, 'The Erl-King'
- Will Eaves, 'Murmur'
- Zadie Smith, 'Miss Adele Amidst the Corsets'
- Amanda Lee Koe, 'Siren'

Core novels (to be acquired by the students; no specific edition)

- Ali Smith, Girl Meets Boy
- Jeanette Winterson, The Stone Gods

Core films (available for viewing in the NTU Chinese Library media suite)

- Ang Lee (Dir.) Brokeback Mountain
- David Lynch (Dir.) The Elephant Man
- Kimberly Pierce (Dir.), Boys Don't Cry
- J.L. Brooks (Dir.), As Good As It Gets

Class overview:

- The focus of these classes is literary theory. As such, the core theory texts will form the primary focus of class discussion.
- The literary and filmic texts will be used as material for the exploration of the principles/issues/questions discussed in the core theory texts.
- To enable fruitful discussion, it is essential that students read/view the core material in advance of class.

Assessment overview

- In-class presentation (25%)
- Coursework essay (30%)
- Blog project (20%)
- Take-home test (25%)
