NTU Semester 2, AY 2021/2022

An Incident in the Rebellion of 1745 by David Morier

HL4030 – Scottish Literature

Course guide subject to minor alterations

Please print only when necessary

This course will introduce you to the main achievements, themes, and characteristics of Scottish writing from the late-eighteenth century to the present day. We will cover Romanticism, the Enlightenment, Modernism, and the contemporary era. The course will trace the vast transformations undergone in modern Scotland and study how literature has both reacted to and driven those changes. The course includes prose and poetry from the nation's three languages, Gaelic, Scots (both alongside translations), and English. We will study some of the canonical texts and masterpieces of Scottish literature as well as some neglected works. We will also sample some Scottish delicacies along the way. Fàilte!
