

Eden Pang has attained a Master of Linguistics, University of Delaware (USA) and she started her career as a senior international business officer in Enterprise Singapore, where she travelled to Suzhou Industrial Park to assess the training needs of park investors. Her working stint in Enterprise Singapore has given her a greater understanding of how and why the Singapore government plans and implements policies. In 2001, she began her teaching career in Nanyang Technological University (NTU Singapore), and she trained more than 20,000 students in Professional Communication. Additionally, she is the course coordinator and lecturer of “Singapore: Imagining the Next 50 Years” in NTU Singapore. The course entails topics such as Singapore Foreign Policies, Singapore Demographics Challenges, Singapore Economy, Singapore Security and Threats, Singapore Social Integration, and lastly, Singapore Aspirations and Identity. Eden is passionate about sharing the Singapore Success Story to both foreign and local students. She is an avid pianist and flower designer.
