

AY2026–2027 HL2007 Contemporary Literature and Culture Seminar

Course Outline and Schedule

Introduction:

This module offers students texts from which to understand the contemporary world from the late-twentieth century to the recent present. Through the lens of critical theoretical ideas and debates, we will read works that explore the intersectional as well as individual preoccupations on how the human body is situated both in physical and abstract space, all the while interpellated by forces such as politics, race, gender, class and science/technology. With readings that cover genres of fiction (science fiction, realist fiction, autofiction), literary essays and poetry, as well as non-print materials such as films, installation art, visual images (paintings and photographs), and music (MTV, digital), students will gain an in-depth and critical appreciation of the contextual and overlapping tensions within our contemporary societies.

Learning Outcomes:

By the end of this course, students will

- Identify the key features of major literary-critical forms relevant to the period, namely postmodernism, postcolonialism, feminism and intersectionality
- Discuss meaningfully how the later half of the 20th century's literary and cultural forms respond to, echo, challenge, and/or undermine historical, social, and political metanarratives
- Evaluate literary-critical sources, genres, and readings to deepen understanding of relevant theories
- Raise critically informed questions (in class discussions, presentations, an essay abstract, and research abstracts)

Assessment:

10% - Participation (classroom discussions, activities, group work, seminar postings)

40% - Final Essay (argumentative essay of 2300-2500 words, including citations on a subject agreed with tutor; 1 primary and 1 secondary text)

50% - Final Exam (testing a broad range of literary-critical skills, across a range of materials drawn from the primary readings in the course; 2 primary and 2 secondary texts excluding those used for final essay)

Course Policies:

Attendance and Participation:

The success of any seminar depends on the active participation of all its members. You should endeavour to complete the weekly required readings and any assigned work, and be ready to participate in class discussions. Failure to do so will reduce your participation grade significantly.

Barring illness or emergencies, you must attend every seminar. If you need to miss a class, you should supply a medical certificate or account your absence via email (the latter not more than twice in the semester year).

You must arrive on time, as late entrants disrupt everyone's concentration, who made an especial effort to turn up punctually for class. Since it's an early morning class, please factor in peak-hour traveling time and buffer time.

Late Work and Extensions:

If your essay is late, it will be marked down by one third of a letter grade for each day that it is overdue (i.e. a paper that would have received an A will receive a A-). No work will be accepted more than three days late without prior permission. Extensions will be granted only for exceptional circumstances, including documented illness or genuine emergency.

Generative AI:

Generative AI (such as ChatGPT) is not designed for research and can be inaccurate. If you intend to use generative AI for your work in any capacity, you must get written permission from me first. You must follow the university's prevailing policies about how to acknowledge the use of generative AI in your work. Although it can be a useful tool, you must not use it to replace your own thinking or learning.

As this is an examinable course, heavy reliance on AI for your essay will inevitably handicap your ability to write 2 critical essays during the exam, as evidenced by students' performance over the last years for this course.

Plagiarism and Academic Dishonesty:

Don't do it! If I find that you have misrepresented someone else's work or wording as your own you will fail the assignment and possibly the course. If you are unsure of how or when to cite a source, please ask me or refer to the university's academic integrity resources online.
